The News in Brief. The election in Maine, on Monday, for Governor and members of the Legislature, resulted in the complete success of the Republican ticket, and the returns thus far indicate a largely increased Republican majority in the State. ## The United States Fair.

The opening of the seventh annual Fair of the United States Agricultural Society, a Chicago yesterday, was attended by tens of thousands of people from all sections of the country. The attendance was commensurate with the ample provision which had been made for the reception of visitors, and the list of attractions of course comprised everything in the vocabularies of Agricultural, Mechanical and Scientific Industry. The Fair grounds occupy 45 acres lying directly outside of the city limits, west of, and including a portion of the fine belt of timber from which the suburb of Cottage Grove takes its name. The surface of the ground is level prairie, and it is nearly square with the main entrance on Cottage Grove Avenue. The modes of conveyance hither and thither between the Fair Grounds and the city consist of a Horse Railroad, a special train running every thirty minutes on the Illinois Central Railroad, tugs on the Lake, and carriages, omnibusses, &c., ad infinitum.

The centre of the Fair Grounds are devoted to an enclosed circular park, around which runs a forty foot track rolled smooth and firm. Within this the sward is smooth and unbroken. On the south side of this circular park is the Grand Stand for the officers of the Fair. Along the south-west side of the park and its encircling track runs a bank of seats for the accomodation of several thous and spectators.

The principal structures are six targe halls, each fifty, by one hundred and fifty feet, and with weather proof composition roofs. The six large halls are respectively, com-

One of the most attractive features of the opening day, and in fact the feature of the fair, was the grand cavalcade of horses and cattle in the following order:

1st. Cattle led by grooms, passing entirely round the ring, and thence returning to their stalle.

2nd. Stallions led by grooms, crossing the track and occupying the centre park. 3rd. Procession of led mares and geldings, passing entirely around the track, when all the animals returned to their stalls, the cavaround a circle of a half mile's circumference. Another interesting feature of the Fair will be the trotting match in which the celebrated mares Flora Temple and Princess will take part, and which is set down for the third day. During the Fair, Masonic, Ecclesiastical and Editorial Conventions are to be held at Chicago, and altogether our neighbors will, no doubt, have quite a gala week election, though perhaps not feeling the same of it. says: e Milwankee News says that the extreme North-west is not satisfied with the Ropublican ticket. Guess you are mistaken there, Mr. News. At least, we have seen no there, Mr. News. At least, we have seen no signs of dissatisfaction, though we claim to be from the Korth-west. On the contrary, everybody thinks we have got a good ticket—an excellent ticket—a first rate ticket—and a ticket that can't be beat, and every Republican herenway is going the whole ticket.

These figures show a material falling off as compared with previous weeks, and the indications are that the enormous imports that caused so much uneasingss, heretofore have been checked.

We commend the following extract from the brilliant speech of HENRY WINTER DAVIS to his constituents in Baltimore, on Monday evening, after his nomination for re-election to Con-

I desire to say_ that the mass of Northern men opposed to Democracy, and styled as the Opposition, are sounder men, and more careful of the interests of the Union, than the men calling themselves Northern Democrats. The fact is that men throughout the Union are desirous to get rid of this Democratic misselves. rale. Past differences are forgotten, they now look calmly on affairs, and desire to bet-now look calmiy on alians, and desire to better their political condition.

I repeat again, our interests are with the Opposition of the North. We grow neither cotton, sugar, nor rice; neither do they. We are interested in agricultural, commercial and manufacturing pursuits, and therefore our interests are with the North, and with them alone. I will further add that Maryland in-terests are sustained by the Opposition party of the North, and voted down by Southers Democrats. Our policy now is to be united on the opening of the next Congress. Let us show where we stand, and not be alarmed by any enemy in our rear. If we put of a bold and determined front, my word for it, victory will ensue, and the next Administration will be of a different complexion from the present Arrand Bread.—A new kind of bread, known as the grated bread, is now made in London, in the manufacture of which no fermentation is used. The process consists in forcing ready prepared carbonic acid, by means of suitable machinery, into the water with which the dough is prepared, then mixing apparatus the dough is received into the baking pans, and passed into the ovens without being touched by the hands. By this means the constituency of the flour is left both unchanged and uncontaminated—the loaf being accordingly absolutely pure bread. If the attempt succeeds, it will supply a great desideratum, as the medical profession have pronounced fermented bread injurious to a large class of individuals.

milwankee, and everybody knows that is not much. The Journal has worked more zealously against the Republican nominations in Racine county, than any Democratic sheet ever thought of doing, for the past year or two. Happily, its influence is extremely limited, and it makes but little difference which side it is on when it comes to the final result. Mr. Clement is a disappointed, souried, and embittered politician, who having failed in his own ambition, is ready to grow at every one's success. His bitter opposition to Gov. Randall arises wholly from personal motives and will therefore have but little influence with real Republicans. The most he will do, will be to furnish the Democratic press with texts on which to base sensation loaders.

Mr. Douglas and the Presidency. To the Editor of the New York Herald: - A Washington correspondent of your paper recently spoke of me as an advocate of the election of Mr. Douglas to the Presidency, and of my visit to the North as having something to do with the furtherance of his interests. CURE FOR DISORCE.—Michelet, in his remarkable book L'Amour, mentions the fol-lowing novel method of curing the disposition in married couples to become separated: "In Zurieb, in the olden times, when a quarrelsome couple applied for divorce, the magistrate never listened to them. Before deciding upon the case he locked them up for three days in the same room, with one bed, one table, one plate and tumbler. Their food was passed in to them by attendants, who neither saw nor spoke to them. When they came out at the end of three days, neither of them wanted to be divorced."

THE UNDERSIGNED BEGS LEAVE

Messrs. FREUND & GROSSINGER,

of New York, have appointed him SOLE AGENT for he sale of their

HUNGARIAN WINES.

The superiority of these wines over sile others, as well as the purity of the same, will be seen by reference to the annexed certificate of C. T. JARSON, M. D., &c., &c. Alesses Fround & Grossinger will keep me constantly supplied with a well-assorted stock, which will enable me to furnish my respective customers with a superior article at New York prices.

Gentlement—I received from Son light samples of Red and White fungarism Wines, which, at your request, I have submitted to chemical analysis. I send you the details with this letter.

From my researches it appears that these Wines are pure, and they coor ain nothing but the products of the graph. I can confidently renommend them to the public as good and pure wines, and as not so likely to become sour as the light wines of Frence.

I exposed my samples lott-feight hours to the air, in a warm room, without any souring having raken.

THE CONFESSION well do I remember. That evening in September, Silver stars were glearning. And the moon was beaming; With love my soul was dreaming — Dreams so sweet!

Close he sat beside me— Who will dare to chide me? Its called me "charming creature," Said each lowing feature Should be to him a teacher, While he lived;

Vowed he loved me blindly. Then he begged me kindly for a pledge of sweetness from my lips' repleteness, from the was not weakness, But divine! He drew nearer, nearer-Held me closer-dearer; Held me closer—dearer.
And white half elated,
He begged and walted,
Still I hesitated—

Said 'twas wrong, Softly he was smiling.
All my fears beguiling.
Tenderly corressions. My half with many a blessing— I blush while now confessing— But I loved! I yielded—ah! 'twas thrilling, Dreams of biles fulfilling—

Vain was all regretting;
I ceased coquetting.
Its idle arts for getting—
My heart is his!

[ Written for the Senting! ] My Friend's Visit to Plainville.

FACTS FROM HIS DIARY BY GEORGE B. MARION.

Reader, have you ever attended a country sewing circle? If you have not, and wish to spend a happy evening, you had better follow my advice, which I give gratis, and take a trip to a Plainville circle, passing under that industrious name. I attended it according to invitation, and was unite surprised of that industrious name. I attended it according to invitation, and was quite surprised at their way of sewing. I will tell you how they did it—they did int sew a stitch; nor did I see any work baskets. It was nothing but play and kiss. There was no aristocracy there; no haughtiness. Everybody stood on one common level. Somehow or other the ladies kept stealing kisses from me at a fast rate. I suppose it was heaven.

one common level. Somehow or other the ladies kept stealing kisses from me at a fast rate. I suppose it was because I was unacquainted with their gomes.

Carrie was happy and looked lovlier than ever; and even Hattie threw off her cloak of soberness and became the gayest of the gay. They were profuse in their attentions to me. Being tired of the romping. I took a teteatete with them, and chatted away with Hattie with such earnestness, that Carrie slipped from my side without my noticing it; nor did I know that she had gone, until I felt a gentle tap on my shoulder, and looking up saw Carrie and a gentleman standing before us.

"Mr. Jeddediah Hopkins," she said in a laughing manner, and taking Hattie's arm, disappeared among the many guests that thronged the room.

Mr. Hopkins was a true specimen of an ignorant, country Yankee youth; standing at least "six foot three in his cowhide boots." His features were rough: freekles, a low forehead, and small, gray, sunken eyes, to gether with a broad face, Roman nose, receding clin and thick lips, and long carroty hair, made up his personal beauty. Secretly wishing him anywhere, but where he stood, I said out of politeness merely: "Happy to make your acquaintance, sir."

Crossing his hands behind him, and stretching out his neck a-la-gander he answered, with a nasal twang: "And I am most happy to make yourn." and continued, stapping me on the shoulder as he spoke, "how does yer like that ar sweet heart of mine; arn't she a perfeck honeyoake?"

'Oh, so and so," said I, perfectly disgus-"What does yer do for a livin, of I may'nt ask?" asked be. "I am practising law at present, sir," I replied like a martyr to his questions, which Immense Stock of Dry Goods!! he plied fast
"A laryer! well, du declare. I onet kinder thort of larnin to be a laryer; but kinder thinkin on't did'nt. Your laryer; but kinder thinkin on't did'nt. Your laryers wear such good duds, and sich likes," said he in reply to my auswer to his question.

Glancing around the room I caught the twinkling eyes of Carrie and Hattle, who seemed to enby my predicament. I adroitly left Mr. Hopkins a few moments thereafter and sought out Carrie, whom I soon found, and asked her why she made me acquainted with such a bore. and asked her why she made me acquainted with such a bore.

"Why, sir," said she rather indignantly, "do you call Mr. Jeddediah Hopkins, the letrothed husband of your friend Hattie, a bore," and then went into a laughing fit, which I cured by a kiss or two. I enquired for Hattie, whom I pitied moreand more every time I thought of Jeddediah Hopkins, Esq., and was informed that she was getting ready to go home. Carrie led me to the room where the "ladies" fixins" were kept. There I found a number of ladies following Hattie's example.

to go home. Carrie led me to the room where the "ladies" fixins" were kept. There I found a number of ladies following Hattie's example, and many were the meaning glances given me by them. They were even unpolite enough to pass flattering comments on my figure, and moustache, within my hearing; and "looked daggers" at Hattie, as she gave me permission to accompany her. "She steals and flirts with everybody," was the remark I heard drop from the "rosy lips of a blooming lass," as we passed on our way home. Carrie went with us a part of the distance, and wishing us a "good night" returned. It was a beautiful moonlight night, and as Hattie did not seem inclined to hurry, we took a long stroll by the river's side.— Ere we parted, at her door, she cliotted a promise from me to call the next evening.

That night I dreamed of her, that being more than I did of any other lady I ever became acquainted with; and before the next day had far advanced, I was in love, deep and desperately. I tried to reason with myself; but Hattie was my heart's image. "That which the heart loves no reasoning can destroy," I found to be true in my case; for the more I reasoned, the better she seemed to me.

A week passed away and we had yet

A week passed away, and we had met night after night, and enjoyed ourselves in moonlight walks on the river's brink. On Sabbath day we met at church, and she invited me accept a seat in her pew, which request I complied with. I attended which request I complied with. I attended the church but once. Everybody turned about face and stared at Hattie and myself as we passed up the small aisle; nor did they stop their provoking glances until the benediction was given. Mr. Singleton's buggy held us all, and I made him take me home by the way of Mr. Cole's, where Hattie stopped. As we left the church I noticed the 'boys' 'dressed to fits in their Sunday-go-to-meeting's best,' standing around the door waiting for their 'igals.' Bobbing for them as they issued from the house, and either footing or riding home in couples. Such, Mr. Singleton said was the fashion; Sabbath being courting day in harvest time.

One evening as Hattie and I were going home, after having, with some friends, spent the afternoon at Carrie's, we crossed a footbridge, which was thrown across a streamlet that emptied its murmuring waters into Crystal river. It was made of three boards laid on piles, and as we crossed the second board Hattie stopped and arranged it to suit some whim of hers. When we reached the other side, she drew me into the shade of the trees, so that we could not be seen, and wished me to watch the foot-bridge. I did, and after a few moments noticed a ligure moving cautiously forward as though bent on mischief. Slowly he walked the bridge and as he stepped on the second arch it gave way, precipitating him into the streamlet, then some five feet deep. He swore like a "fallen angel," and as he reached the side from which he came, shook himself a la dog, and disappeared. CHAPTER IV. and disappeared.

Hattie laughed long and loud, making the woods echo and re-echo its musical sound; nor would she have ended, had I not inter-

"Oh, Hattie," said I, "it was cruel to throw him into the river in that way."

"No, it was not, I think. He came to me this morning, and said that we were to be married Sunday evening after next, in the village church, and that my father had bought the wedding dress, &c. Also, that in the meantime, I should not go with any other 'feller.' I langhed at him, but he was in carnest, and as I left the house, he called after me, saying that he would call around and see me home. As we stood at Carries' door she, and again gave vent to her deviltry in a "Love him; why, Mr. Keep, I should think you ought to know, having heard our conversation that day," and she shapped my face for "speaking so funny."

"As you do not love him," said I,in a fal-tering voice, "can you ever love me good enough to become my own loved Hattie, my little wife," and I passed one hand around her, and in the other I held her little hand. She looked toward the ground a few mo-ments, and methought I could see, by the faint monthing to hims start lover her tage. A TTORNEYS AND COUNSELLORS AT Law Office, No. 5 Martin's Block, Milmankee, 181824domo.

Reader, I shall not detail the sayings or doings on that happy evening. The "wee sma' hours of the night" were nigh at hand, as we parted, which we were loth to do.

The following day I could have been seen wending my way toward the residence of Mr. Coie. I found that gentleman at home. He mighty dollar with a "never parting grip," but an indulgent father. I related to him the story of my betrothal with his daughter, and humbly asked his consent. To me it was no surprise to hear a roughly spoken "No sir." I pleaded my cause to the best of my ability; but he was immovable. He said that she had found a husband in Jedde-JOHN G. TOWNSEND, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW, and C. S. Commissioner, No. 219 East Water street. I inquired for Hattie and he said that she had not yet returned from her morning ride. Bidding him "good bye," I was soon again at home—Mr. Singleton's. Here I was not a little surreigned of Section. TTORNEYS AT LAW, AND SOLICIT-ORS IN CHANCERY. ew Post Office Building, second figor. sprisely

Here I was not a little surprised at finding Hattie and Carrie. They had merely called in, while passing, to see Mr. Singleton.— Both of them wished to know how I had succeeded in my errand. I gave them the interview. Hatfie did not know what to do under the circumstances; but Carrie, her friend and adviser did, and suggested the ides of eloping. She laid out her plans, to which we agreed. The morrow's night was the one we chose. Hattie was to retire as usual so as not to excite varsience and if all this as not to excite suspicion; and if all things proved favorable, I was to tap at her chamber window, and she would come forth. Mr. Singleton's buggy was to be held in readiness for us, and would soon take us where we twain could be made one. Mounting their steeds they sped away home, down the road.

Money Matters.

We have nothing of special interest to mention in regard to our money market. Exchange continues steady at 1 premium, with a moderate supply. The heavy demand for money, to meet the wants of produce buyers is fast consuming all the marblus currency in the heavile. mand for money, to meet the wants of produce outers is fast consuming all the surplus currency in the hands of the banks, and it is therefore quite difficult to negotiate any other than produce paper at present, at the regular houses. Our bankers and heavy brokers very judiciously give the preference to this class of paper, without regard to their own immediate profits, and we are very confident, that although a few may suffer in convenience from this course, it will, in the end, re-sult beneficially to the community at large. All the offerings of good produce paper are freely taken at 10 ? cent. Not much doing in the way of loans outside of the banks, and rates nominal. NEW YORK MONEY MARKET OF TO-DAY,-We have the following report of the doings in the New York Money and Stock Market of to-day, by telegraph !
